

Group Interventions for Sexual Offenders

Yolanda Fernandez, Ph.D.

Group based interventions can be a daunting task for treatment providers who are more comfortable with individual work. However, group work tends to be more cost effective and can offer treatment providers several benefits including opportunities for skill growth and practice expansion. This workshop will provide an overview of the advantages of group work. Topics covered will include practice of therapist strategies necessary for group work as well as training, supervising and supporting group therapists. The goal of the workshop is to help participants adapt their current skill set to group work or expand on their existing group work skills.
