

PROM DRESS RUGBY

Women's rugby dresses up to celebrate end of season in style

On Nov. 8, the Colorado State University women's rugby team got together to play "prom dress rugby." This is a tradition the team does annually to celebrate the end of the season. The whole team gets dressed up in prom dresses and plays a friendly game of rugby. "It's just a good team bonding experience to have for us to just goof around and have fun all together," freshman Emily McGlone said.

Members of the women's rugby team play a game in prom dresses on the Intramural Sports Fields Nov. 8. This is common practice in collegiate rugby, but the Colorado State University team says that they are probably having more fun. PHOTO BY RYAN SCHMIDT THE COLLEGIAN

Senior Tehani Grasso throws the ball to a teammate near the sideline of the Intramural Fields Nov. 8. PHOTO BY RYAN SCHMIDT THE COLLEGIAN

Freshman Shea Slonkosky and Emily Jagerhorn help Head Coach Saf Weinberg put on a dress. PHOTO BY LUCY MORANTZ THE COLLEGIAN

Freshman Emily Jagerhorn runs down the sideline while senior Ruby Charney tries to tackle her from behind. PHOTO BY LUCY MORANTZ THE COLLEGIAN